Golden Age

After the Persian War, Athens was second only to Sparta in military power. In 478, Athens created the Delian League, an alliance of states that paid for Athenian naval protection from Persians & Pirates. Persians diverted much of that $ to Athens. He commissioned the Parthenon and other elaborately sculpted buildings to beautify the city and employ its people. And he instituted pay for public service, which broadened Athenian democracy. The city became a

THE DELIAN LEAGUE

Fear of Persian attacks led to the formation in 478 BC of the Delian League, an Athenian-led alliance of some 200 Greek city-states. In exchange for money or ships, Athens and its fleet of triremes evicted Persian interlopers, cleared the waters of pirates, and secured trade access to the BLACK SEA. But Athens grew coercive and it also became
